

“Emerge” Lecture Series

May 8: Michael Webb is an internationally renowned architect and visionary. Webb is one of the prescient and influential founders of Britain's Archigram Group, a team of architects founded 40 years ago that has posed seminal - if outrageous - solutions to provocative problems in urban building and design. Like the other members of Archigram, he has had a tremendous influence on an entire generation of architects, many of whose ideas, technically unfeasible when they first proposed them, are realizable today. Above all, their "sci-fi" assumption that members of a highly mobile society could plug into a sophisticated, worldwide communications network is no longer a fantasy.
