

Your. Words. Matter.

Have your faculty-sponsored work published in

City Tech Writer

Volume 18

We publish outstanding writing from ALL disciplines: lab reports, research papers, essays, interview transcripts, creative written work, short films, and more!

This will be our THIRD all-digital issue. The brand new website, which can be viewed here, supplements students' voices with video interviews, audio versions of entries, and images.

CTW brings your ideas, stories, and poetry to life in accessible alternative formats. Last year, we were proud to feature the first short film in City Tech Writer's history.

We encourage submissions from all departments, and are always looking to represent new courses. Eighteen years in, we're still hoping to showcase everything that the written word has to offer City Tech.

This year, we are also excited to introduce the Photo Riffs Contest: a chance to submit creative work inspired by one of last year's talented student photographers! More info is available at the below Openlab website.

If you are a student, you'll need a professor to sponsor no more than 3 submissions.

If you're a professor, please upload up to 3 students' work electronically (preferably in Word, but PDFs acceptable) to the following site:
<https://openlab.citytech.cuny.edu/citytechwriter>

Keep your submissions coming throughout the fall semester! The deadline for submissions is November 15, 2022.

If uploading poses difficulties, you can still email the submission (and any questions) to Prof. Lucas Kwong at ctwsubmissions@gmail.com. Thanks for submitting. I hope you'll help us turn words into worlds.
